1. Social Democrats demand legal reports on rent extensions

Let's start with housing. The social democratic parliamentary group has demanded from the Government the legal reports that support the rent extension regime provided for in Law 11/2026. He wants to avoid new interpretive conflicts. Minister Conxita Marsol defends that the extensions of the new regulation will be automatic. The question, now, is to know the opinions and check if the wording resolves the doubts raised by the courts. The request for information is a fact; the documentary response remains to be seen.

2. Temporary workers arrive in Andorra without a previous contract and with accommodation problems

Second issue: temporary workers. Ràdio i Televisió d'Andorra reports, based on data attributed to Andorra Research and Innovation, that a significant part of last season's temporary workers arrived without a previous contract. Another report describes wage differences and shared hosting issues. These are relevant data for the tourist model, but the original report and methodology must be consulted before concluding the conclusions.

3. Debate on 2027 budgets continues after amendments rejected

Third topic: budgets. The General Council rejected, on October 22nd, the three amendments to the entire project for 2027. The debate continues with the amendments to the article, and the parliamentary documentation includes an extension of the deadline until November 18th. Now it is time to examine where the resources are allocated and which priorities are reflected in the final text; the project is not yet a definitively approved budget.

4. Five MIT students will visit the public high school in January

In education, five Massachusetts Institute of Technology students will participate in a new edition of the Global Teaching Lab program in public high schools in January. The collaboration, according to the Government, is approaching a decade. It is a training opportunity; it would be interesting to know later the evaluation of the centers and the students.

5. Winter mobility requires checking tires and chains

And let's finish with winter mobility. With the arrival of November, it is advisable to check the equipment of the vehicle. Andorran regulations provide for chains or equivalent elements prepared for use, or suitable tires, and regulate traffic when there is snow or ice on the road. Do not confuse the winter calendar with an identical obligation in all road conditions.
